

Rotational movement simulator

The present invention consists of a rotational movement simulator having three degrees of freedom. It possesses a hybrid mechanical architecture, with two parallel mechanisms mounted in series, allowing a CABIN to have wide angular displacements in all directions around a fixed point. The actuation is realised by three rotating electric motors. Furthermore, a static equilibrium system, composed of three springs, supports a large portion of the simulator.
